A PROCLAMATION.

By the President of the United States of America.

The approaching close of another year brings with it the occasion for renewed thanksgiving and acknowledgment to the Almighty Ruler of the Universe for the unnumbered mercies which He has bestowed upon us.

Abundant harvests have been among the rewards of industry. With local exceptions health has been among the many blessings enjoyed. Tranquility at home and peace with other nations have prevailed. Frugal industry is regaining its merited recognition and its merited rewards.

Gradually, but, under the providence of God, surely, as we trust, the nation is recovering from the lingering results of a dreadful civil strife.

For these and all the other mercies vouchsafed, it becomes us as a people to return heartfelt and grateful acknowledgments, and with our thanksgiving for blessings we may unite prayers for the cessation of local and temporary sufferings.

I, therefore, recommend that on Thursday, the twenty-seventh day of November next, the people meet in their respective places of worship, to make their acknowledgments to Almighty God for His bounties and His protection, and to offer to Him prayers for their continuance.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the city of Washington this 14th day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seventy-three, and of the independence of the United States the ninety-seventh.

U. S. GRANT.
By the President:
HAMILTON FISH,
Secretary of State.

We have heretofore called attention to the Gift Concert enterprise in the interest of our Fair to be held in December, and now refer to it to keep it before the people. Dr. Carr, who has taken the matter in charge, is a driving, go-ahead man, and will push it on to success, we hope. He is a musician also, and we hope a Concert will be given, which will be a pleasure to hear, as well as to have a ticket for a prize. This Fair requires the aid and support of all our citizens, and if they do not put their shoulders to the wheel like men, we fear this will be the last attempt made to hold a Fair here at all. We believe our merchants appreciate this, and will do all in their power for the Fair. The tournament will be a great institution this year, the Knights appearing in full armor. Arrangements have also been made for some fine horse races. Let us have a full turnout, and a good show. There is plenty of interest in this county alone to make a grand exhibition, and as many of our sister counties have no Fair this year, we hope to be able to report their presence with us.

Of the importance of supporting this institution, we hardly think it necessary to speak. To the farmer it is especially important, and if we have any public spirit at all in this vicinity, it will be witnessed at our Fair.

Their Heads are Turned.

The recent gleam of light thrown upon the Democratic-Conservative-Liberal Republican-Anti-Monopoly party, discloses it as discussing in a genteel manner, the question, whence came the ray which penetrated their previous gloom. It would be natural to suppose that some thankfulness would be shown, on the principle that the smallest favors ought to be gladly received; but this party with the long name seems hysterical. It may perhaps be accounted for as caused by the revulsion of feeling which ensues after a weight of complete despair is lifted from the mind. As to a boat load of men upon a boundless ocean, out of the usual track of ships, with the last mouthful of food and water gone and a furious storm coming on, a faint hope of deliverance comes from their peril by the sight of a sail on the distant horizon, so is the recent elections to the party of odds and ends.

However, it is not probable that this difference of opinion as to the causes of success will continue to excite the opposition, for it is likely that the Republican organization will take effectual means to quiet them upon this too exciting topic.

The planters in Anson county are backward in moving their cotton. There is but little money in circulation, and all those who can hold their cotton refuse to sell at panic prices.

EDITORIAL BUDGET.

A dispatch from London, of Wednesday, says: A fog more dense than that of yesterday hangs over London to-day. There have been numerous accidents in the streets, and at this hour, 12:30 p. m., locomotion is almost suspended.

General Bellemare wrote a letter to M. Du Barail, Minister of War, informing him that if the monarchy was restored he (Bellemare) would resign his position in the army. Immediately upon the receipt of the communication by M. Du Barail, he issued an order placing the General on the retired list.

The chief of the Chinese educational commissioners in New York, the assistant commissioner and the superintendent in charge of a large number of Chinese students at Springfield, Mass., arrived in New York Wednesday, and will spend several days visiting public institutions. The visit is made especially for the benefit of the chief commissioner, who will soon return to China, where he holds high rank.

A "dead cat" swindle is the latest development of ring trickery. It has just been exposed in Troy, where the corporation paid fifty cents for the removal and interment of pauper felons. The surprising number of funerals led to suspicion, and an examination disclosed the fact that the city was paying several times for the last sad rites of each individual cat, the corpse being resurrected and reburied until it could be no longer handled. No satisfied with the profits of this expedient, however, the rascals were found to have used stuffed hides when legitimate carcasses were scarce.

A young French officer, M. Saint-Genest, relates in one of the Paris papers what he has recently seen in Alsace-Lorraine. The Germans are waging a bitter war in the severed provinces against the three colors. The other day a Prussian officer planned a tri-colored cockade to his horse's tail, and dragged it in the dust. "Bah!" said the peasants, "even the animals wear French colors." Tri-colored flags wave from the treetops and the German troops are constantly engaged in felling timber to get rid of the obnoxious red, white, and blue. When the enemy has gone to sleep the patriarch of the family rouses up the children and teaches them French, and the good wife pulls out the flag which she has kept hidden since Froeschwiller, and unfolds it in the silence of the night.

PAULINE CUSHMAN.

Dramatic Episode in California Life.

The following is now going the rounds of our Western exchanges: "Some of our readers will remember 'Major Pauline Cushman,' an actress of slight talent who traveled through the country a few years since, taking the leading part in a play called 'The Scout of the Cumberland.' The major claimed to have been a scout in the early part of the late war, and to have secured her military title in a legitimate way, and the play mentioned was a painful effort to place before the public a few of the perils she had undergone while serving her beloved country as a scout. For a long time back the major has been unknown and unheard of, not to say unwept, in every section of the country; but it seems, by a long article in the San Francisco Chronicle, that she has not been inactive. The following advertisement appeared in a San Francisco journal some time since:

"A young widow lady, refined and educated, will take charge of a gentleman's house in the city or country, and desires a home. Address Ella Catullier, San Francisco post office, Cal."

There is a place known as Sausman, near San Francisco, and there, at the time this advertisement appeared, lived two bachelors, named A. R. Sausman and Will Sayers. Sausman is described as a rough, warm hearted old customer, who had been through the Mexican war, and was well known by many of the Mexican veterans in San Francisco. Sayers was a young man, perhaps thirty-five. These two men lived together, doing their own cooking, and naturally enough they yearned for some one of the correct sex to lighten their labor. Seeing the advertisement, therefore, they wrote to Mrs. Catullier, and in due time secured her services. It was soon discovered that Sayers and the woman failed to agree—that they rarely spoke to each other, and that the woman appeared to avoid the young man. This could not last long; and one day Mrs. Catullier announced to the astonished Sausman that she was going back to San Francisco, previously evading Sayers, who had first persecuted and then persistently slandered her. Sausman endeavored to dissuade her from her purpose, but to no avail. "We do not care to give this separation at any great length; but the closing part of the account in the San Francisco Chronicle is so intensely dramatic, and is so evidently worked up for eventual adaptation to the stage, we feel that a failure to give it may be a failure to appreciate the advance sheets of the coming great American tragedy."

Thursday, the 26th of September, was set by her for her departure. At 11 o'clock in the forenoon the stage from Pescadero drove up crowded with passengers. Mrs. Catullier's trunks were on the stone porch, waiting to be placed in the boot of the stage. She emerged from the house and entered the store, which was filled with a dozen or more people, including a portion of the passengers. Advancing to Sayers, she thus accosted him: "Mr. Wm. Sayers, you have heaped indignities upon me ever since I have been here; I do not call them insults because it is not in your power to insult me; but you have tried to insult me, and you have maligned my character. I now demand that, in the presence of these witnesses, you retract everything you have said, and apologize for your ungentlemanly conduct."

The spectators stood thunderstruck. Sayers flushed up with anger, and in a contemptuous manner refused to make the reparation.

"Mr. Sayers," she continued, "my father is dead, my husband is dead, and I have no big brother to fight for me. I have to fight my own battles, and I tell you I shall be obliged to give you a horsewhipping if you don't make the retraction I have demanded."

Sayers replied, contemptuously, "Oh, go off! What will folks think of you coming into a store and talking like that to me?"

Thereupon the determined woman walked out to the stage, took the long whip from the driver's seat, and, winding the long lash around the tough stock, advanced upon Sayers and dealt him half a dozen blows as severely as her strong right arm could lay them on. Every one stood in amazement, but not a finger was lifted and not a mouth opened to oppose the execution of the sentence. At the sixth or seventh blow Sayers, who could not well run, succeeded in grasping the whip.

"Let go of that or I'll shoot you!" exclaimed his angered foe, thrusting her hand into her pocket.

"No, no! You shan't shoot me! I won't be shot by a woman!" returned the terror-stricken young man. He saw no opportunity for escape, and he therefore grasped her around the waist, thus imprisoning her pistoled arm. "Let go my whip, then," was the reply. She succeeded, by a sudden movement, in jerking the whip from his hand and freeing herself from his grasp, whereupon she proceeded again to lay the blows on thick and fast. The whipstock flew into shivers, and the humiliated young man, more dead than alive—from terror if not from bruises—finally broke away and darted past his angry assailant, crying as he ran, "Don't let her shoot me! Don't let her shoot me!" He took refuge in the house, locking the door after him as he entered.

The belligerent woman, then turning to Mr. Sausman, who had stood by an interested spectator of the affair, said: "Mr. Sausman, you have ever been a gentleman in your conduct toward me. I told you not long ago that some time I would let you know my true name. It is Major Pauline Cushman."

"My God!" exclaimed the old Mexican veteran, "is it possible? Major Pauline Cushman the scout of the Cumberland?" He could say no more.

Major Cushman (for the young widow lady was none other) mounted the box with the driver, remarking to him in hearing of the astounded bystanders:

"Mr. Ingalls, I have ruined your whipstock, but it was in a good cause. I want you to give me its dimensions and I will purchase another for you, and will have it silver-mounted, and it shall bear this inscription: 'Presented by Major Pauline Cushman (the scout of the Cumberland) to N. P. Ingalls, in return for one which she broke over the back of William Sayers, September 26, 1873, for aspersing her reputation.'"

The Major is modest, but fame will find her out despite all her efforts to the contrary. She "has had so many adventures," the Chronicle concludes, "that she counts this last one of no comparative consequence, and has seconded the efforts of Sayers and his friends to hush the matter up. The affair was only intended to affect the immediate neighborhood of Sayers residence; but it was witnessed by too many eyes to be kept long a secret."

The Raleigh Erasays: "After an absence of nearly two months, the Editor has returned to his post."

After this week the Era will give his impression of some of the places, persons and interests that came under his observation during a somewhat extended tour in the Eastern and Western sections of the State.

The Daily News, of this city, last week, made the astounding announcement that Mr. Hearne had retired from the Era, and gone to locate at Statesville to witness the investigation of the South-Mountain-Deaver affair before the Federal Court, spending two and a half days in that delightful town, and save the further absence above alluded to, the statement had no better foundation than a brief business visit to a lively, pleasant and thriving town.

With equal propriety the Era might seize the occasion of Mr. Jordan Stone's visit to the World Fair, and say that gentleman had withdrawn from the Raleigh News and located in Weldon. The rumor that Mr. Hearne had been succeeded by Mr. Holden must have grown out of the fact that it had been determined to strengthen the editorial staff of the paper by the acquisition. The News would do better to leave the Era to make its own announcements.

A little boy about seven years of age, son of Phil. Thiem, Esq., fell from the fence of the Presbyterian church Wednesday evening and broke his arm in two places. At the latest accounts the little sufferer was doing as well as circumstances would permit. So says the Raleigh News.

An alarm of fire in Raleigh Wednesday morning was caused by the burning of a chimney at the Methodist parsonage. The fire department turned out promptly, but their services were not needed.

To the Friends of the Cape Fear Agricultural Society:

Your officers have labored diligently to make the next Fair a success, such as is worthy the great city of Wilmington and the county which sustains it. They have perfected all the arrangements and now alone need the hearty co-operation of those desiring a success. They now appeal to the citizens of the city to come forward and do their duty. We admit that the financial crisis has dampened the ardor of those from whom the Association expected aid. But we ask the question: Has it really injured any? There have been no failures; we are all worse frightened than hurt. Then come forward like men and do your duty. Officers can't do everything without the aid of those really interested. Those men who have the reputation of their city at heart; those men who will really derive pecuniary advantage from the annual collection of a vast concourse of people, each man leaving in the city from $10 to $100. Let those who reap the profit come forward like liberal men and contribute to its success. Deal fairly, and if benefitted do not understate the advantage of the Fair to the city, in order that you may conceal from the world how much you may really profit by it. Let the croakers and the despondent, the over-ambitious and wilfully obstinate close their mouths for the time. Say a good word, and not be ever ready to complain of the management. Activity in managers is a very good thing, yet it requires a little liberality on the part of the wealthy, influential, the business men—running through all the various departments of city and commercial life. The commission merchant, the wholesale and retail merchant, the railroad man, the hotel and saloon keeper, the butcher, the baker, the artist, the banker, in fact, all and every one interested in the welfare of the city should come forward like men and contribute but a pittance to the support of the enterprise.

And especially do we call upon the newspapers of the city and district to lend their aid to the enterprise. They have ever been liberal and public-spirited, and when they know and understand the difficulties of the management they will not be ready to blame. The State Fair was a success, but it was at an expenditure of $40,000.

The management only asks that those most interested shall contribute to make up such purses as may be within their means. It would ask of the Commission merchants to make up one, of the retail merchants one, of the rail road men one, of the turpentine buyers and distillers one, of the mill men and timber buyers one, of the cotton factors one, of the butchers one, of the hotel keepers one, saloon keepers one, and thus encourage the best horses to be brought to the fair. These need not be large in any instance, yet the producer will in a measure judge of the liberality of each by its encouragement of that holiday sport to which the city has invited the country.

Our premium list will be liberally provided for. The country has given evidence that the approaching fair will be the largest and most successful that we have yet held. As Christmas approaches the holiday will be kept in that spirit in which neighbor should meet neighbor on an high and festive occasion. With a spirit of generous rivalry the farmer will meet the farmer and vie with him in exhibiting specimens of those things which go to make up the wealth of the land. Here, too, fair hands will exhibit the work which will refine the rough nature of the beholder, while it will adorn the Floral department of the annual exhibition. Here will the sturdy farmer exhibit his stock and while it is beheld and admired will his heart glow with pride as encircled after anconium is bestowed upon his care, his thrift and his possession. All will be one grand, one gay, one festive scene, made up from the energy and wealth of the sons of toil and beautified by the hand of art. Fostered and encouraged by the hand of commerce and adorned and made lovely by the bright eyes, smiling faces and fair presence of lovely woman.

Let no croaker endeavor to throw a damper upon the coming Fair. But, as friends, let all come forward and act their parts well and the Fair must be a success.

THANKSGIVING PROCLAMATION.
By His Excellency, the Governor of North Carolina.
EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
Raleigh, October 22d, 1873.
WHEREAS, The people of North Carolina have been abundantly blessed during the past year, and the earth has yielded bountifully of its products to its soil so that the garner of the husbandman are filled to overflowing; and the industrious mechanic has realized a rich reward for his labor, and every class of our population prospered in all laudable enterprises; and WHEREAS, above all, fraternal feelings and good will have in a great measure been restored in our midst, and no plague, pestilence or famine, has visited our State; Now, therefore, as it becomes us, a grateful people, to render thanks to Almighty God for these and numerous other blessings showered upon us in His great mercy, I, Tod R. Caldwell, Governor of North Carolina, in obedience to law and in conformity with an honored precedent, do appoint and set apart

Thursday, November 27th, 1873, as a day of public Thanksgiving throughout the State; and I do earnestly invite the clergy of every denomination to open their respective houses of worship on said day, and to exhort their congregations to humble themselves before the throne of the ever living God, and render unto Him praises which are justly due, invoking for themselves, their State and their whole country, His guidance and protection throughout all time to come.

"O come, let us sing unto the Lord, let us make a joyful noise to the Rock of our salvation." "Let us come before his presence with thanksgiving, and make a joyful noise unto him with psalms." Done at the city of Raleigh, on this 22d day of October, Anno Domini one thousand eight hundred and seventy-three, and in the ninety-eighth year of American Independence.
TOD R. CALDWELL,
By the Governor:
J. H. WEAVER, Private Secretary.
